

FORMER UTAH TO SUE PRUSSIA

Ferdinand Holzfendorf Alleges Conspiracy of Officials.

THROWN INTO A DUNGEON

CHARGED WITH INSANITY AND KEPT IN CONFINEMENT.

EX-SERGEANT FERDINAND Holzfendorf of the king of Prussia's body guard dragons, who was formerly a well-known mining man of Salt Lake, is trying through the Washington authorities to get $10,000 damages from the Prussian government for alleged unlawful imprisonment in an insane asylum. According to information received from Washington, Holzfendorf claims that, after becoming a citizen of the United States, he was confined for a long period in German asylums without hearing and regardless of testimony to the effect that he was not insane. The high court of Berlin finally declared him sane, but he was kept in confinement until he had suffered physical agonies, he has been refused any recompense whatever, and he also claims that the American authorities in Germany have refused him aid. He now asks that, as an American citizen, his claims for damages be presented to the Prussian government.

A number of years ago Holzfendorf was quite well known among the mining men of Utah and Idaho and held a number of valuable mining claims in both places. These and all the other fruits of fifteen years' labor, he claims, have been lost through his treatment by the Prussian authorities. The imprisonment and brutal treatment which Holzfendorf received at the hands of the Prussians, he claims, were the result of an attempt on his part to test the truth and be honorable among a lot of corrupt officials while holding an official position in Prussia.

Was Custom House Officer. According to the story told by Holzfendorf to the Washington authorities, he was born in Prussia in 1838 and when a young man became a sergeant in the body guard of the king. After that he became a custom house officer, and it was while in this position that he claims he got into trouble with crooked officials, and that because of false testimony against him he was arrested and confined in a Prussian insane asylum for over a year without having a hearing. All his petitions to the government were refused, he claims, and he was forced to remain in the prison until he succeeded in making his escape.

He then came to America and became a naturalized citizen. For about twenty years he remained here and spent the greater part of the time in Utah and Idaho, where he secured a number of valuable mining properties and other possessions. He returned to Germany in 1887 and petitioned the government for redress for his false imprisonment. The officials refused him any aid and attempted on several occasions to rob him of his American papers. He was again seized by the police, he says, and without any charge or hearing confined in the insane asylum at Daildorf. He then called upon the American authorities in Germany to assist him, but says they offered him no aid whatever. This was due to the stories told by the officials by the Prussian authorities.

Confined in Dungeon. Holzfendorf claims that while in prison he made an attempt to escape and, being caught, was confined in a dark dungeon having no light or air, and was to drive him insane or make him commit suicide. On four occasions the guard attempted to kill him, he says, and threats were made to take his hands and feet and throw him into a pond of water, then turn a hose upon him. He declares that one of the inmates of the asylum was killed in this manner while he was in there. For over a year he was kept in a totally dark cell, and he was almost wrecked physically and mentally when he got out.

After he had been in confinement for about a year the second time a trial was ordered. He was returned to his home in the asylum, but he took an appeal to the high court of Berlin and the verdict of that court, he says, was that he was not and never was insane. He was then released and made his way back to the United States. It is upon the decision of the high court of Berlin that he bases his claim against the Prussian government.

Mr. Holzfendorf is now in Washington, according to the information from there, and has set forth his story in a long communication to the secretary of state, verifying it by numerous affidavits which he has secured. He is urging that the government take some steps in the matter.

RATHER THAN BE TREATED BY EGAN, SOLDIER AWAITS DEATH IN QUARTERS

Joseph Oviatt, a private in the Twelfth battery, died at Fort Douglas yesterday of consumption, after an "official" illness of two days. The illness was caused by a bad cold, a good deal of which was caused by a cold at the post. Oviatt has been in a weak and emaciated condition for six months, that time having elapsed since the ravages of the disease began to tell on him. He would not, however, report at the hospital. In spite of the urgent appeals of his friends he refused to have his name go on the sick list.

Oviatt's sole reason for avoiding the hospital was a fear which he had grown on him since the Egan court-martial. Major Egan, the surgeon, it will be remembered, was tried for treating patients with cruelty, and some of the testimony was of a nature that might not have been reassuring to the soldiers unfortunate enough to be on the sick list.

Oviatt was a middle-aged man. He has been in the service about ten years and served with the Twelfth battery in the Philippines. With this organization he came to Salt Lake. His home is in York, Neb., and the remains will be shipped there for burial.

"I'll die soon enough, anyway," he is reported to have said on one occasion. At any rate, he remained on duty and his case escaped observation until Friday night, when he had a hemorrhage. He was then put on the sick list and moved immediately to the hospital, where he died yesterday morning in a semi-conscious condition.
